

Rescuers are the cat's meow Jamie First

If you are after some TLC, look no further than 2nd Chance Cat Rescue.

The not-for-profit organisation, run solely by volunteers, is dedicated to finding homes for abandoned cats and kittens.

Founder of the rescue group, Daniela Maslen, said she started 2nd Chance Cat Rescue two years ago inspired by a need to help.

"Cats are much harder to re-home because of the misconceptions," she said.

"A lot of people prefer dogs over cats."

Re-homing almost 200 felines since opening, Ms Maslen said she was not selective.

"We rescue all cats and all mixes, even if they are ferals, strays or cute and cuddly kittens."

Each animal is de-sexed, micro-chipped, vaccinated, worm and flea treated, and vet-checked.

All potential owners are screened using a questionnaire designed to ensure the best possible match.

The 2nd Chance Cat Rescue team is hosting an adoption day at the Hampton Park Veterinary Hospital between 11am and 1pm on Sunday.

www.2ndchancecatrescue.com.au