

Flapper's feathers fly doing the rock pool rock Jamie First

A group of fairy penguins love rocking out with Victorian zoologist Chris Humfrey.

The world's smallest penguins enjoy putting on a show for their audience.

The Wild Action mobile zoo founder said the fairy penguin was one of a colony of eight that had been bred in Melbourne to educate children about biodiversity.

"These cute little guys are part of my family. They are hand-reared and incredibly tame, so they love company," Mr Humfrey (above) said.

The Wild Action zoo team travel the state staging interactive shows featuring native fauna at schools and work places.

You can catch the penguins in the "Rock Pool" show.